WHEELING, APRIL 15, 1893.

Our Flag Hauled Down.

Commissioner Blount has got so far with his Hawaiian mission as to haul down the American flag, a bugle mean-while sounding the retreat. It does not necessarily follow that he will report against annexation, or that the President would approve such a report. Nevertheless it is turning back the hands, gives new hope to the monarchical party and to any and all other parties intriguing against annexation.

This act, however, is to be taken in connection with the remark of the commissioner that any interference by any other foreign power would be regarded as an act of hostility against the United States. If this means anything it means that this country is ready to go to war with any power that undertakes to lay hands on Hawaii.

This we believe to be true, and it makes all the more strange the withdrawal of the protectorate. So long as the American flag was flying over Hawaii no other power would have dared to interfere. The presence of our flag was notice to all the world that the United States was there to stand between the little country and any and all comers.

The assurance given by the commissioner brings us back to a primary question which has never been answered satisfactorily: If the people continue to acquiesce in the provisional government, and if that government continues to insist that the United States will not take the islands some other country shall have them, and if we determine that we will not accept them as a gift, what right have we to object to Hawaii making a bargain with any other country?

Between incorporating with ourselves a country that wants to come in and denying to that independent country the right to hitch on to some other country there is a wide difference. In the one case we could sustain ourselves easily on moral as well as political grounds; in the other we should be forced to potflogging.

MR. PRESIDENT, West Virginia would like to know when the pie wagon is to pass this way.

Southern Immigration.

The first thing the convention of southern governors did was to make a bad selection for its presiding officer. Governor Fishback, of Arkansas, on whom this honor was conferred abused the opportunity to work off a bitter partisan harangue under the guise of an appeal to the President to appoint more southern men to foreign posts. He declared that for years the south has been slandered by the Republican party, and he wished it understood that "we use the word slander adverbially."

His paper, bombastic, blatant, domagologic, is just the kind of thing to warn off southern soil anybody who does not vote the Democratic ticket. Worst of all his ill-advised harangue went unchallenged in the convention. When this gathering was talked of first the INTELLIGENCER expressed a doubt whether West Virginia has anything to gain by being part of a distinctly southern immigration movement. This doubt is strengthened by the assinine utterance of the president of the convention of southern governors. West Virginia will do best to go it alone.

CANADIANS are annexing themselves to the United States at the remarkable rate of 100,000 a year. This is decidedly interesting. It may be better for us to take the Canadians in and leave Canada out.

Wool and Woollen Duties.

The American Wool and Woollen Reporter, of Boston, favors free wool, but says that "25 per cent upon goods would not be enough even with free raw materials." Enough for what—protection or revenue? The proposition is to impose a rate of duty that will yield the most revenue. Protection is to be knocked in the head.

Those New England manufacturers who have favored free wool or winked at the free wool proposition may yet have to turn to the wool-growers for aid. That will be about the time of the next election, after the Democratic tariff measure shall have begun to pinch them.

JAPAN won't bother itself about Hawaii. Japan isn't big enough. John Bull is about the right size.

SENATOR BRICE has been unable to attract the attention of the administration in his direction, and his friends are not feeding fat on pie. Possibly he has failed to show a proper appreciation of the real greatness of the lucky man. There may be human nature even in the white house.

If Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Whitney had fallen out before the election how different it might all have been. Whitney was a power in the campaign time. Is it so easy to forget?

Old Ties Sundered.

A very circumstantial story is published in New York to show that Mr. Whitney and the President no longer do the political brother act. In fact, as the story goes, they do not meet in these days and all the eloquence of the persuasive Lamont has failed to induce Mr. Whitney to show himself at the white house.

The explanation is that Mr. Cleveland authorized Mr. Whitney to make certain promises to Tammany which President Cleveland now finds it convenient to ignore. This compromises Mr. Whitney and he resents the treatment by closing up navigation between himself and the President.

If this be a true story time will verify it. It is true that Mr. Whitney made promises to bring Tammany in line, it is true that Tammany went to work, and it is true that the laborer has not been paid his hire.

If the cigarettes made in this country were placed end to end they would girdle the earth three times. If all the victims of the deadly cigarette in the same time were piled on top of each other there would be a stack of them as high as Trinity church spire. We are a great cigarette people.

The Servian Trick.

When we got to the bottom of the Servian business we shall be likely to learn that Natalie, the clever mother of the young king, had a good deal to do with upsetting the regency and ministry and placing the reins of government in the hands of the boy.

The shrewd plot was rather too much for a boy under seventeen years old to conceive, to say nothing of the execution. Older heads are back of him, and Natalie's is probably one of them and perhaps the chief. It was altogether a neat scheme.

But what is the practical value of a throne in a country where governments are unmade so easily? A careful insurance company would want a high premium before it would consent to do business with King Alexander I of Servia.

The Richmond Dispatch has this reference to Major J. C. Alderson, one of West Virginia's representatives at the convention of southern governors in Richmond:

Colonel Alderson, of West Virginia, is an enthusiastic Confederate, and at the soldiers' home was soon the centre of an interested group of veterans.

Major Alderson was an enthusiastic Confederate. In the present tense we like to look on the gallant major as an enthusiastic Union man.

The INTELLIGENCER's Washington correspondent feels authorized this time to announce as a certainty the appointment of our Cousin Joe Miller to be commissioner of internal revenue. This will be welcome news to Mr. Miller's friends at home and to the employees of the bureau, who hold him in high esteem.

The tragic death of Major J. H. Bristor, of Martinsburg, will be heard of with sorrow by the large circle of friends he had in this state. Major Bristor was one of the best men in West Virginia. This is the second fatal accident of the same kind in this state within less than a week.

MR. WATSON says in the Louisville Courier-Journal that Mr. Cleveland "stands where his party placed him, on a free trade platform." This is what we have been saying about the platform and this is what many West Virginia Democrats have been denying.

SENATOR FAULKNER was spoken of for a District of Columbia judgeship which got away yesterday. It might be well for some West Virginian to send the President another map of this state, and this time let it be a big one in high colors.

BREAKFAST BUDGET.

A quaint-looking locomotive, drawing two queer-looking cars, pulled out of the Pennsylvania railroad shops at Jersey City on Tuesday for the World's Fair. The locomotive was the John Bull, the first traction engine ever used in America. It was built in 1831, and ran until 1852, doing its duty in every conceivable way until it was superseded by a more modern style of machine.

CURRENT COMMENT.

Still Unreconstructed. Charleston News and Courier (Dem.).

The best thing for the southern states would have been the establishment of their independence as a nation. Their connection with the northern states costs them many millions of dollars annually, and brings them no compensatory benefit whatever. They sought to establish their independence for that reason, and desired to withdraw from the old Union peaceably. No one on their side forced a "conflict between the sections" or desired a conflict. The war was waged on the part of the northern section to retain a rich taxing district under the same general government.

Still Drawing on the Republican Party.

New York Advertiser (Rep.).

Mr. J. Q. Smith, of Ohio, who, it is said, is slated for the office of commissioner of internal revenue, was a red-hot Republican so long as that party kept him in office. He was a representative in Congress, commissioner of Indian affairs and consul at Montreal under Garfield. When the party got tired of him he turned reformer. He ardently supported Cleveland and has, in the opinion of the Dedicated One, earned a reward. He is therefore to be summoned. He is a man of picaune ability.

EXPERIENCE.

Atlanta Constitution.

Jim Jones, he was a candidate for office, so he was; He'd been workin' clean from daylight in the Democratic cause; He'd heard about the salary an officeholder draws; So he went in for an office in the mornin'!

He brushed his old black beaver, an' he polished up his boots; He got his twenty packages of Georgia-made cheroots; An' they missed him from the village and political disputes; For he went in for an office in the mornin'!

But the office wasn't comin', an' they told him for to wait; The race was kinder crooked when he thought it kinder straight; But Jones, he kept a-swingin' on the Democratic gate; "For," said he, "I'll ketch the office in the mornin'!"

Soon the congressmen had smoked up every one of his cheroots; An' the mud had worn the polish from the leggin's of his boots; An' the office jes' got mixed up in political disputes; An' Jones, he kinder weakened in the mornin'!

So he boarded of a freight train that was runnin' by the rule; For he didn't have a dollar, an was feelin' like a fool; An' then he went to plowin' with a mortgage on his mule; An' he cussed out every office in the mornin'!

A BLACKSMITH'S STORY.

Reminiscent of Longfellow's Beautiful Poem.

This Interesting Story is Not a Romance, However,

But is a Statement of Positive and Indisputable Fact.

Since Longfellow wrote "The Village Blacksmith," the story of which beautiful poem everybody knows, a sort of romance has been associated with the village smithy.

Here is another story of the village blacksmith which is equally interesting: For many years the hammer and anvil of A. S. Gould had rung in the little town of Garland, Maine. Suddenly they became silent.

"I broke down," said Mr. Gould. "Three months ago I was almost helpless. I was very weak and debilitated and could do no work. My hands were so transparent that one could actually look right through them, my blood was so poor. I lost flesh rapidly. My kidneys and liver were in a very bad state.

"I used that remarkable medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and now I am well and strong and attend to my work again in my blacksmith shop. I have gained 15 pounds of healthy flesh.

"Every man in Garland knows me, for I have been in business here for 13 years.

"My friends and family are much surprised to see me well again."

This is especially the time of year when a wonderful cure like this should be published far and wide, for now is the time when more people are ailing and complaining of poor blood, nervousness, weak and tired feelings, stomach, kidney and liver complaints, etc., than at any other season. In fact, now is the time that everybody is thinking of taking a spring medicine, and deciding what is best to take.

The cure of Mr. Gould should decide the question as to what to take, for the great remedy which restored him to health and strength will cure others. It is a fact beyond doubt that Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is the greatest of all health restorers and is, above all others, the best spring medicine to vitalize the blood, strengthen the nerves and start up a natural and healthy action of all the organs.

Drugs keep it for $1, and it is purely vegetable and harmless. It is the discovery and prescription of Dr. Greene of 35 W. 14th Street, New York, the successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, who can be consulted free, personally or by letter.
